Headline:
Friday feeling chilly and remaining dry. Sunny spells.

Today:
Chilly with some bright or sunny spells. Cloud increasing at times through the day. Possibly a sunnier end to the day as cloud tends to break and clear from the north. Coldest conditions near coasts where winds will be strongest. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
A cold night with frost developing and long clear spells for most parts of the region. Cloud may increase again, especially after midnight. Winds mostly decreasing light. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Saturday:
Saturday will be another colder than average day and remaining dry with variable cloud amounts. Some bright or sunny spells. Winds mostly light, but brisker near the coast, especially Humberside. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Sunday milder with sunny spells. Cloudier later with strengthening winds. Overnight rain and chance of snow with strong winds. Monday and Tuesday much colder with snow showers and coastal gales.
